Dear Mr. Barany,

I need to send you my sincere apologies. I accidentally sent you a draft email which was not meant to be sent.

I wanted to get in contact with you about the upcoming Municipal elections in Slovakia on November 10. We are intensifying our efforts around the globe to protect the integrity of elections and aiming to establish a relationship with electoral commissions.

I want to assure you that we will be monitoring this election closely. If you want to flag any suspicious behaviour on our platform to us, please do so at any time.

We also want to encourage people to go vote. On the day of the election, people will see a notification at the top of their newsfeed that 1) links to more information about the election itself, 2) allows people to share that they have voted.

I wanted to ask you if people can find information about the municipal election on your website and if we could link to that info in our election day reminder?

Please let me know if you have any questions or remarks.

Also, apologies again for messing up our first conversation.

Looking forward to hearing from you.

Best regards, A [REDACTED]

Dear [REDACTED] G [REDACTED],
thank you very much for your kind message, but I am afraid, that there is a mistake. I am chairman of the State Commission for Elections and Control of Political Party Financing in Slovakia not in Slovenia:

Slovakia and Slovenia are two different countries. In Slovakia the next parliamentary elections are scheduled for 2020.

Yours

E. Bárány

Dear Mr. Bárány,

I would like to take the opportunity to get in touch with you in respect of the upcoming Slovenian Parliamentary Elections on June 3. My name is Anika Geisel and I am the politics and government outreach manager for Facebook that is responsible for Central & Eastern Europe including Slovenia.

First of all, I would like to inform you that we are committed to ensure the integrity of all elections around the globe. We establish cross-functional teams for every election and have done so for Slovenia as well. That team is overseeing all Facebook-related activities around the election and includes experts from policy, comms, legal and security.

If you have questions or remarks concerning Facebook, please do not hesitate to reach out to me directly.

We also believe that democracies are stronger when more people are engaged. We show a message on Election Day to remind people to vote and help them find relevant information. For that election day reminder, we are linking to official pages, and in this case, we would like to link to the official page of the National Electoral Commission so that people can inform themselves.

We would really appreciate your feedback on this and am happy to discuss the details with your authority.

I am looking forward to your response.

With best regards,
